

Widman:

How would you sum up this basketball season for the men's team?

Walsh:

You know we have had a ton of injuries. I think that it's obviously tough because you know we had a bunch of close games but I think that there could be something good that happens in Brooklyn. I'm optimistic.

Widman:

And you talk about feeling optimistic for Brooklyn but how are you feeling with Selection Sunday only five days away?

Walsh:

I right now, I'm not feeling great about it because I do think we're going to have to win two games and I think, you know, Wake should be a good game and that we can win. I think Carolina is going to be very difficult. But you know we did play well with them last week. So anything can happen.

Widman:

So judging from that response, I'm going to guess that you don't think that Cuse has enough to get in right now. So what do you think would get Cuse in? What do you think they have to do to get into the tournament? Is it beat Wake or is it more than that?

Walsh:

I would think that they would have to beat Wake and also beat Carolina which would be their second game I don't believe that, you know, winning versus Wake is enough to get into the NCAA tournament.

Widman:

And on a more positive note, what has been the best moment or what has been your favorite moment of the season so far?

Walsh:

I think that the win in Louisville was actually a great win. You know a road win especially playing in that arena it's very difficult. So I think that's been the highlight of our season and I think if we can play like that then we have a chance to make the tournament.

Widman:

Thank you.
